George Washington and slavery Slavery was then a longstanding institution dating back over a century in Virginia where he lived; it was also longstanding in other American colonies and in world history. The preeminent Founding Father of the United States and a hereditary slaveowner, Washington became uneasy with it, but kept that opinion in private communications only, and continued the practice until his death. The history of George Washington and slavery reflects Washington's varied attitude toward the ownership of human beings. Washington's will immediately freed one of his slaves, and required his remaining 123 slaves to serve his wife and be freed no
