Eye movement in reading For example, Ibn al Haytham, a medical man in 11th-century Egypt, is reported to have written of reading in terms of a series of quick movements Eye movement in reading involves the visual processing of written text. Most basic knowledge about eye movement was obtained during this period. From the late 19th to the mid-20th century, investigators used early tracking technologies to assist their observation, in a research climate that emphasised the measurement of human behaviour and skill for educational ends. He reported that eyes do not move continuously along a line of text, but make short, rapid movements (saccades) intermingled with short stops (fixations). Since the mid-20th century, there have been three major changes. observation. Javal's observations were characterised by a reliance on naked-eye observation of eye movement in the absence of technology. This was described by the French ophthalmologist Louis Émile Javal in the late 19th century 51626dae36

Medical history The medical history, case history, or anamnesis (from Greek: ἀνά, aná, "open", and μνήσις, mnesis, "memory") of a patient is a set of information the The medical history, case history, or anamnesis (from Greek: ἀνά, aná, "open", and μνήσις, mnesis, "memory") of a patient is a set of information the physicians collect over medical interviews. It involves the patient, and eventually people close to them, so to collect reliable/objective information for managing the medical diagnosis and proposing efficient medical treatments. Medical histories vary in their depth and focus. For example, an ambulance paramedic would typically limit their history. The medically relevant complaints reported by the patient or others familiar with the patient are referred to as symptoms, in contrast with clinical signs, which are ascertained by direct examination on the part of medical personnel. Most health encounters will result in some form of history being taken 51626dae36

Diagnosis is often challenging because many signs and symptoms are nonspecific. For example, redness of the skin (erythema), by itself, is a sign of many disorders and thus does not tell the healthcare professional what is wrong. Thus differential diagnosis... 51626dae36 For educators and researchers, reading is a multifaceted process involving such areas as word recognition, orthography (spelling), alphabetics, phonics, phonemic awareness, vocabulary, comprehension, fluency, and motivation. 51626dae36

Medical diagnosis Often, one or more diagnostic procedures, such as medical tests, are also done during the process. The information required for a diagnosis is typically collected from a history and physical examination of the person seeking medical care. It is most often referred to as a diagnosis with the medical context being implicit. Sometimes the posthumous diagnosis is considered a kind of medical diagnosis.
