Night Life [feat. B.B. King] - 4:28 1963 - Johnny Tillotson released a version as a single on Cadence from his album It Keeps Right On a-Hurtin', peaking at number 50 on the Billboard Hot 100. It's Not Supposed to Be That Way - 3:30 Just to Satisfy You - 2:50 With the dawn of the new decade, Nelson had not achieved the commercial success at RCA that he had hoped for. He gained a measure of fame writing songs that were hits for Faron Young ("Hello Walls"), Billy Walker ("Funny How Time Slips Away"), Patsy Cline ("Crazy"), and Roy Orbison ("Pretty Paper"), but most of his singles stalled on the charts, his biggest single at RCA being the Vegas-styled cover "Bring Me Sunshine," which hit number 13. His producer, RCA head Chet Atkins, had tried various approaches, from a live LP to a Texas-themed concept album, but success remained elusive. After the underwhelming performance of the album My Own Peculiar Way, a year passed before the November 1969 sessions began for Both Sides Now. My Own Peculiar Way - 3:38 == Biography == In 2013, Carson published a sequel to the work titled Red Doc> in which she continues the story of Geryon and Heracles, employing a similar poetic style. == Track listing == 1964 - Joe Hinton had a major crossover hit with his version from his album Funny (How the Time Slips Away), which went to number 1 on the Cash Box R&B chart, number 13 on the Billboard Hot 100, and number 14 in Canada. Good Hearted Woman [Live] - 2:57 Liberty released Nelson's first two albums, ...And Then I Wrote and Here's Willie Nelson, in 1962 and 1963 respectively, after country stars like Faron Young, Billy Walker, and Patsy Cline had scored huge hits with his songs. However, these albums bore little resemblance to the ones he would later become famous for, as they were augmented with the lush instrumentation that was typical of the Nashville sound. "The critical praise was strong," Nelson later remembered, "but the public's reception remained lukewarm. It was my live performances...that helped me cultivate a small but loyal following." With the arrival of The Beatles in 1964, Liberty abandoned their country division and, after a stint as a pig farmer in Ridgetop, Tennessee, Nelson was signed to RCA by Chet Atkins. Nelson admired Atkins, but also had reservations: "I liked Chet. I had great respect for his hit-making history and, of course, his own masterful musicianship. I had a feeling, though, that like so many others on Music Row, Chet saw me as an outsider writing outsider songs... Stay All Night (Stay a Little Longer) - 2:34 The novel is considered one of Carson's best works and the one that brought her name to fame. It is also regarded as one of the most complex characterizations of a gay character in contemporary English-language literature. Among the main themes it addresses are lost love, the image of the artist as a monstrous being, and the role of translations. Rainbow Connection - 4:30 Good Times - 2:27 Crazy [Original Demo] - 3:58 Released after Nelson signed with Atlantic, this was the closest thing to a "Greatest Hits" retrospective RCA issued at the time. == Background ==
