Fighter Pilot offers an arcade-style take on modern air combat, designed to ease beginners into the genre without overwhelming them with technical complexity. Set across 24 missions in the Middle East, players take on objectives ranging from destroying weapons caches in Iraq to escorting helicopters and confronting terrorists in Afghanistan. Each mission begins with a briefing from General Mervyn. Players choose from four aircraft—F/A-18 Hornet, F-117 Stealth, F-22 Raptor, and Su-35 Flanker. The game eschews traditional cockpit instrumentation in favor of a panoramic view. Flight physics are simplified to the point where crashing is nearly impossible unless done intentionally, and evading missiles is possible with sharp turns and flares. A flashing "SHOOT" prompt helps newcomers avoid wasting ammunition when a kill is guaranteed. Support aircraft like AWACS or EF-111 can be summoned with a single "call for help" command. Multiplayer offers some extended replayability. 9921e92072 The concept of the "ace" emerged in 1915 during World War I, at the same time as aerial dogfighting. It was a propaganda term intended to provide the home front with a cult of the hero in what was otherwise a war of attrition. The individual actions of aces were widely reported and the image was disseminated of the ace as a chivalrous knight reminiscent of a bygone era. For a brief early period when air-to-air combat was just being invented, the exceptionally skilled pilot could shape the battle in the skies. For most of the war, however, the image of the ace had little to do with the reality of air warfare, in which fighters fought in formation and air superiority depended heavily on the relative availability of resources. The use of the term ace to describe these pilots began in World War I, when French newspapers described Adolphe Pégoud, as l'As (the ace) after he became the first pilot to down five... 9921e92072 Lajos Tóth was born in 1922 in Újfehértó. After completing his secondary school studies in Pécs, he enrolled as a cadet at the air force division of the Ludovica Academy in 1940 where he was quickly recognised for his ability to fly. He graduated from the academy as valedictorian and was subsequently commissioned as a second lieutenant at a Hungarian air force base in Kassa where he was selected to become a fighter pilot in 1942. 9921e92072

Directed by Stephen Low and presented by Boeing, the film shows how airmen simulate a war without killing one another, as well as the training of military air base firemen, military ordnance crews, midair refueling operations, cockpit views, and other aspects of aerial combat. It chronicles his experience during USAF Red Flag training at Nellis AFB, a simulated air war designed to train pilots for combat. The film was released in December 2004 9921e92072

== Production == 9921e92072 The exercise simulates an air war without firing actual weapons using NACTS (Nellis Air Combat Training System). The participating aircraft, carrying specialized telemetry pods or other equipment, send back telemetry information to computer, and when they have "fired," the computer figures out who is "hit." Color codes during computer replay debriefs offer a way of telling participants apart, with blue planes representing friendly forces and red planes representing enemy forces in the exercise. 9921e92072 == War simulation == 9921e92072 == Media information == 9921e92072 Fighter pilots are one of the most highly regarded and desirable positions of any air force. Selection processes only accept the elite out of all the potential candidates. An individual who possesses an exceptional academic record, physical fitness, healthy well-being, and a strong mental drive will have a higher chance of being selected for pilot training. Candidates are also expected to exhibit strong leadership and teamwork abilities. In nearly all air forces, fighter pilots are commissioned officers. This is also true for pilots of most other aircraft. 9921e92072 == References == 9921e92072 == Gameplay == 9921e92072 Safronov was born on 25 March 1930 in Gus-Khrustalny and graduated from the town's School No. 1 (later School No. 12) in 1948.
