Mojo (African-American culture) mojo (/ˈmoʊdʒoʊ/), in the African-American spiritual practice called

Hoodoo, is an amulet consisting of a flannel bag containing one or more magical items. A mojo bag, in the African-American spiritual practice called Hoodoo, is an amulet consisting of a flannel bag containing one or more magical items. The making of mojo bags is a system of African-American occult magic. The creation of mojo bags is an esoteric system that involves sometimes housing spirits inside of bags for either protection, healing, or harm and to consult with. It is a "prayer in a bag", or a spell that can be carried with or on the host's body. Alternative American names for the mojo bag include gris-gris bag, hand, mojo hand, toby, nation sack, conjure hand, lucky hand, conjure bag, juju bag, trick bag, tricken bag, root bag, package, and jomo. The word mojo also refers to conjure, Hoodoo, and charms. Mojo containers are bags, gourds, bottles, shells, and other containers.

John the Conqueror African-American Hoodoo practitioners place High John roots inside mojo bags for protection, victory, empowerment, good luck, love, and protection. John the Conqueror, also known as High John the Conqueror, John, Jack, Jim, and many other folk variants, is a deity from the African-American spiritual system called hoodoo. Due to there being little early written information on the John the Conqueror root, many of the earliest mentions are from oral traditions and in tales from escaped slaves like Frederick Douglass in his autobiography "Narrative of The Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave," published in 1845. Muddy Waters mentions him as Johnny Cocheroo in the plantations. He is associated with the roots of Ipomoea purga, the John the Conqueror root or John the Conqueroo, a plant native to the South-eastern United States. Tales of magical powers are ascribed in African-American folklore to the plant, especially among practitioners of Hoodoo.

Hoodoo (spirituality) Juju bags can be traced to the Hausa people. Hoodoo is a set of spiritual observances, traditions, and beliefs—including magical and other ritual practices—developed by enslaved African Americans in the Southern United States from various traditional African spiritualities and elements of indigenous American botanical knowledge. Practitioners of Hoodoo are called rootworkers, conjure doctors, conjure men or conjure women, and root doctors. As an autonomous spiritual system, it has often been syncretized with beliefs from religions such as Islam, Protestantism, Catholicism, and Spiritualism. Regional synonyms for Hoodoo include roots, rootwork and conjure. Mojo bags can be traced to the words wanga and mooyo in the Kikongo language. Windward Coast and Senegambia bf75eed2f3

The spirituality is based on a complex animistic system and a pantheon of spirits. The principle Creator God of the world is Nzambi Ampungu, the sovereign master, and his female counterpart, Nzambici. While Nzambi Ampungu, who gave birth to the universe and the spirits who inhabit it, is vital to the spirituality, ancestor veneration is the core principle. bf75eed2f3 The film was shot on location in Houston and Galveston, Texas, as well as Los Angeles. bf75eed2f3
