an item (the "underlier") that can or must be bought or sold, a price at which the future transaction must take place, and

Derivative (finance) making a financial "bet". This distinction is important because the former is a prudent aspect of operations and financial management for many firms. In finance, a derivative is a contract between a buyer and a seller. The derivative can take various forms, depending on the transaction, but every derivative has the following four elements:

In managing manufacturing... a future date by which the act (such as a purchase or sale) must take place. Larger organizations generally have three hierarchical levels of managers, organized in a pyramid structure: It is concerned with managing an entire production system that converts inputs (in the forms of raw materials, labor, consumables, and energy) into outputs (in the form of goods and services for consumers). Operations management covers sectors like banking systems, hospitals, companies, working with suppliers, customers, and using technology. Operations is one of the major functions in an organization along with supply chains, marketing, finance and human resources. The operations function requires management of both the strategic and day-to-day production of goods and services.
