Some scholars suggest that agrarianism espouses the superiority of rural society to urban society and the independent farmer as superior to the paid worker, and sees farming as a way of life that can shape the ideal social values. It stresses the superiority of a simpler rural life in comparison to the complexity of urban life. For example, M. Thomas Inge defines agrarianism by the following basic tenets:

It was an agrarian movement and was most powerful between 1900 and 1923. It is a founding member of the former International Agrarian Bureau. It is also the only agrarian party in Europe that ever came to power with a majority government, rather than merely as part of a coalition. The BZNS, one of the first and most powerful of the agrarian parties in Eastern Europe, dominated Bulgarian politics during the beginning of the Agrarian socialism An example of an agrarian socialist party in Europe is the Russian Socialist Revolutionary Party (known as the SRs). The SRs were a prominent agrarian socialist political party in early 20th-century Russia during the Revolution. The SRs garnered much support among Russia's rural peasantry, who in particular supported their program of land socialization as opposed to the Bolshevik program of land nationalization—division of land among peasant tenants rather than collectivization in authoritarian state management. In August 2023, the party dissolved itself. Agrarian law, Roman laws regulating the division of the public lands Agrarian may refer to: Agrarianism In response to the private sale of royal (or common) lands, Paine proposed a detailed plan to tax land owners once per generation to pay for the needs of those who have no land. Some consider this a precursor to the modern idea of citizen's dividend or basic income. The money would be raised by taxing all direct inheritances at 10%, and "indirect" inheritances, those not going to close relations, at a somewhat higher...

Governments and political parties seeking agrarian socialist policies have existed throughout the world, in regions including Europe, Asia, North America, Latin America, Africa, and Australia. Many agrarian socialist movements have tended to be rural (with an emphasis on decentralization and non-state forms of collective ownership), locally focused, and traditional.
