This doctrine is an essential doctrine in Indian philosophy and religion, especially Yoga, Advaita Vedanta, Tantra and Shaivism

This work is also called, in popular parlance, Tulsi Ramayana, Tulsikrit Ramayana, Tulsidas Ramayana or simply Manas. The word Ramcharitmanas literally means "Lake of the deeds of Rama". It is considered one of the greatest works of Hindu literature. The work has variously been acclaimed as "the living sum of Indian culture", "the tallest tree in the magic garden of medieval Indian poetry", "the greatest book of all devotional literature" and "the best and most trustworthy guide to the popular living faith of the Indian people". 9f0b1bac97

Tanmatras come into contact with the objects and carry impressions of them to the manas (mind), which receives and arranges them into precepts. The tanmatras combine and re-combine in different ways to produce the gross elements – ether, air, fire, water, and earth – which make up the gross universe perceived by the senses. The Samkhya school Tanmatras (Sanskrit: तन्मात्रा = tanmātra) are rudimentary, undifferentiated, subtle elements from which gross elements are produced. The senses come into contact with the objects and carry impressions of them to the manas (mind), which receives and arranges them into precepts. There are five sense perceptions – hearing, touch, sight, taste and smell – and there are five tanmatras corresponding to those five sense perceptions and the five sense-organs 9f0b1bac97
