Ville e palazzi. Illusione scenica e miti archeologici (1987) 5aaf305c70 The first mention of a chapel in Castiglione di Garfagnana dates to 1168 and is contained in a bull of Pope Alexander III, which states that it depended on the Pieve of San Giovanni Battista. An inscription records the consecration of the church in 1197 by Guido III, Bishop of Lucca; it is not known whether this refers to the same building mentioned in the earlier document. Of the original structure, only the sandstone masonry survives, partially preserved in the façade and on the northern side. 5aaf305c70 1988: David Alan Brown, Andrea Solario, Electa Editrice, Milan, with Bruno Contardi, Serena Romano, Filippo... 5aaf305c70 Antonio Lupis was born in Molfetta on March 31, 1620, son of Flaminio Lupis and his wife Maria de Ceglia, both members of the local nobility. After completing his classical studies at the Episcopal Seminary of his native city, he moved to Venice, where he spent most of his life. He struck up a close friendship with Lorenzo Tiepolo, a powerful Venetian senator, and Giovanni Francesco Loredan, the founder of the Accademia degli Incogniti, of which Lupis became a member. After the death of Loredan, he moved to Bergamo, where he died on 11 December 1700. Lupis was well known in his day for his erudition. His works, dealing chiefly with moral, historical and artistic issues, show a vast amount of classical learning, which he shows off in a sumptuous baroque prose. 5aaf305c70

In 1981, in project designed and directed by Mario Dal Mas, was converted into a cultural center. The building is derived from a set of adjacent medieval buildings, united to form an urban fortress. The houses surrounding the courtyard were joined together in 1558, as documented in the central fountain. The interiors contain a number of frescoes, dating from the 14th through the 16th-century. 5aaf305c70 Among the library collections are works by the musician Antonio Miari (Belluno 1777- Landris di Sedico 1854) and the soprano... 5aaf305c70 == History == 5aaf305c70 Born in Serravalle, Vittorio Veneto, we know little about his initial training. By 1632, he had sculpted four angels for the main altar of the Church of Santi Giovanni e Paolo in Venice. He then began to collaborate on work for Longhena. In 1637, he completed two sibyls for the entrance portal of the Basilica di Santa Maria della Salute. In 1644, he sculpted the statue depicting Venice for the stairs of the Convent at San Giorgio Maggiore. Around 1649, he completed, alongside Clemente Molli, some statues for the altar of the Blessed Lorenzo Giuliani in the basilica of San Pietro di Castello. In the 1950s, he sculpted a statue of St. Paul and a crucifix for the altar of Victory in the Church of Santi Giovanni e Paolo. In 1661, he was commissioned to she Rin Christ for the church of the Tolentini, but no remains of this sculpture survive. In 1663, he also completed two allegorical statues depicting Prudence and Magnanimity, and the Cavazza coat of arms, for the typanum of the Monument to Gerolamo Cavazza, designed in 1657 by Giuseppe Sardi, in the Church of the Madonna dell'Orto.
