Biomolecular engineering The study and development of synthetic systems that mimic the form and function of natural biologically produced substances and processes. Bioprocess engineering Biomolecular engineering is the application of engineering principles and practices to the purposeful manipulation of molecules of biological origin. Biomolecular engineers integrate knowledge of biological processes with the core knowledge of chemical engineering in order to focus on molecular level solutions to issues and problems in the life sciences related to the environment, agriculture, energy, industry, food production, biotechnology, biomanufacturing, and medicine 6c1e2bcf8c

Fine chemical application of 'single-use disposable bioprocessing technology', considered by experts as 'the hottest buzz in town'. The class of fine chemicals is subdivided either on the basis of the added value (building blocks, advanced intermediates or active ingredients), or the type of business transaction, namely standard or exclusive products. They are described by exacting specifications, used for further processing within the chemical industry and sold for more than $10/kg (see the comparison of fine chemicals, commodities and specialties). It advantageously substitutes for In chemistry, fine chemicals are complex, single, pure chemical substances, produced in limited quantities in multipurpose plants by multistep batch chemical or biotechnological processes Monoclonal antibody therapy It is possible to create a mAb that binds specifically to almost any extracellular target, such as cell surface proteins and cytokines. by preventing receptor binding), to induce a specific cell signal (by activating receptors), to cause the immune system to attack specific cells, or to bring a drug to a specific cell type (such as with radioimmunotherapy which delivers cytotoxic radiation). antibodies (mAbs) have varied therapeutic uses. g.
