Vaginal epithelium categorized by means of the nuclear-plasma relation into "upper"; and “deep” intermediate cells. The further The vaginal epithelium is the inner lining of the vagina consisting of multiple layers of (squamous) cells. This large surface area allows the trans-epithelial absorption of some medications via the vaginal route. The mucus found on the epithelium is secreted by the cervix and uterus. Anatomists have described the epithelium as consisting of as many as 40 distinct layers of cells. Intermediate cells make abundant glycogen and store it. The basal membrane provides the support for the first layer of the epithelium-the basal layer. The rugae of the epithelium create an invaginated surface and result in a large surface area that covers 360 cm². The intermediate layers lie upon the basal layer, and the superficial layer is the outermost layer of the epithelium
