Philosophy of education Many of its theories focus specifically on education in schools but it also encompasses other forms of education. Children Learn, published in 1967, Holt tried to elucidate the learning process of children and why he believed school short circuits that process. Its theories are often divided into descriptive theories, which provide a value-neutral description of what education is, and normative theories, which investigate how education should be practiced. The philosophy of education is the branch of applied philosophy that investigates the nature of education as well as its aims and problems. It also examines the concepts and presuppositions of education theories. It is an interdisciplinary field that draws inspiration from various disciplines both within and outside philosophy, like ethics, political philosophy, psychology, and sociology
