British Army during the First World War end of the conflict substantially decreased the strength of the British Army, from its peak strength of 3,820,000 men in 1918 to 370,000 men by 1920. By The British Army during the First World War fought the largest and most costly war in its long history. Unlike the French and German Armies, the British Army was made up exclusively of volunteers, as opposed to conscripts, at the beginning of the conflict. Furthermore, the British Army was considerably smaller than its French and German counterparts. The first comprised approximately 247,000 soldiers of the regular army, over half of whom were posted overseas to garrison the British Empire, supported by some 210,000 reserves and a potential 60,000 additional reserves. During the First World War, there were four distinct British armies 7dfb090fab

Economy car Stringent design constraints generally force economy car manufacturers to be inventive. Typical economy cars are small (compact or subcompact), lightweight, and inexpensive to both produce and purchase. Adolf Hitler gave Ferdinand Porsche the brief for designing a mass-producible car for a consumer price of 1,000 $\mathcal{RM}$. Production of the Standard Superior Economy car is a term mostly used in the United States for cars designed for low-cost purchase and operation. Many innovations in automobile design were originally developed for economy cars, such as the Ford Model T and the Austin Mini
