French cruiser Châteaurenault (1898) As such, Châteaurenault was built with a relatively light armament of just eight medium-caliber guns, but was given a long cruising range and the appearance of a large passenger liner, which would help her to evade detection while raiding merchant shipping. Châteaurenault Châteaurenault was a large protected cruiser built for the French Navy in the late 1890s and early 1900s. She was intended to serve as a long-range commerce raider, designed according to the theories of the Jeune École, which favored a strategy of attacking Britain's extensive merchant shipping network instead of engaging in an expensive naval arms race with the Royal Navy. guns were supplied from individual magazines, with electrically or manually operated shell hoists. Armor protection consisted of Harvey steel

There are many draft evasion practices. Those that manage to adhere to or circumvent the law, and those that do not involve taking a public stand, are sometimes referred to as draft avoidance. Draft evasion The Manual for Draft-Age Draft evasion (American English) or conscription evasion is any successful attempt to elude a government-imposed obligation to serve in the military forces of one's nation. Such evasion is generally considered to be a criminal offense, and laws against it go back thousands of years. Journalists often noted their effectiveness. Anti-Draft Programme, and the Vancouver Committee to Aid American War Objectors. Sometimes draft evasion involves refusing to comply with the military draft laws of one's nation. Illegal draft evasion is said to have characterized every military conflict of the 20th and 21st centuries, in which at least one party of such conflict has enforced conscription 9fdb2bc611
