Parchim-class corvette 1, was developed for the East German Navy in the late 1970s, and built by the Wolgast Peene-Werft. The first ship, Wismar (now the Indonesian KRI Sutanto), was launched on 6 July 1979 in Rostock, and subsequently another 15 ships were built until 1986. In case of an all-out NATO-Warsaw Pact war in Europe their prime targets would have been the small U-206 coastal submarines of the West German navy. In an emergency, the turret could be manually operated with an optical fire control system The Parchim-class corvette, Soviet designation Project 133. To make production more economical, the Soviet Union agreed to purchase another 12 ships from Wolgaster Peenewerft built between 1986 and 1990, thereby effectively subsidising the East German shipbuilding industry. The ships were designed for coastal anti-submarine warfare. 550 rounds, but the first round had to be manually chambered 09eefa1c76
