Künstlerroman Mitchell's Who Has Seen the Wind A Künstlerroman (German pronunciation: ['kʏnstlə. ʁo.ma:n]; plural -ane), meaning "artist's novel" in English, is a narrative about an artist's growth to maturity. O. the Dust 1943 Betty Smith's A Tree Grows in Brooklyn 1945 Richard Wright's Black Boy 1946 Philip Larkin's Jill 1947 W. According to Encyclopaedia Britannica, one way a Künstlerroman may differ from a Bildungsroman is its ending, where a Künstlerroman hero rejects the everyday life, but a Bildungsroman hero settles for being an ordinary citizen. It could be classified as a sub-category of Bildungsroman: a coming-of-age novel. According to Oxford Reference, the difference may lie in a longer view across the Künstlerroman hero's whole life, not just their childhood years fe544ddbda

Canadian literature As Canadian literature progressed into the 20th and 21st centuries, it began to address a broader array of subjects and themes, such as female and LGBTQ rights, immigrant experiences, environmental issues, the relationship. This progressed into three major themes of historical Canadian literature: nature, frontier life, and Canada's position within the world, all of which tie into the garrison mentality. The earliest Canadian narratives were of travel and exploration. My Beloved (1934), The Loved and the Lost (1951), and More Joy in Heaven (1937). Perhaps reacting Canadian literature is often divided into French- and English-language literatures, which are rooted in the literary traditions of France and Britain, respectively.
