However, major changes in human behaviour make it likely that society must have changed dramatically. In common with much of Europe, the switch from the hunter-gatherer lifestyle to farming around 4000 BC must have heralded an enormous shift in all aspects of human life. Nobody knows what changes may have occurred, and recent evidence of permanent buildings and habitation from 3,000 years ago means that these may still have been... f9aeaa2746 == Importance == f9aeaa2746 == Volume I: The Will to Knowledge == f9aeaa2746 Sharing food in company of others satisfies the dual purposes of sustenance and community.
