The four embark on surreal journeys on their own, which are then interwoven together. The show is set in Boopelite City, a gigantic and whirring metropolis where many of the buildings look like archaic clockworks. The streets are constantly teeming with characters of intensely varied description, and the sidewalks are crammed with anthropomorphic animals, robots, anthropomorphic foods, anthropomorphic sea creatures, and more. The four roommates live in a treehouse, which sits in the middle of the city, surrounded by the forest, the seas and anywhere else the friends could possibly... 246e774595 Bluebeard 246e774595 Meat Cake has been described as "neo-Victorian", with each issue containing a collection of stories featuring a cast of oddball

During his protests, he calls police "robots." He painstakingly tracks down former soldiers and officers, persuading them to disclose details about the deaths. His methods often involve verbal and occasional physical abuse, even injuring one individual to the point of bleeding. At one point, Okuzaki states that "Violence is my forte." The people he talks to give different accounts of what transpired almost 40 years earlier, some saying that those killed were executed for desertion after the war was already over, while others state that they were shot for cannibalizing Indigenous New Guineans. 246e774595
