26 a46cef3826 Within an imperative programming language, a control flow statement is a statement that results in a choice being made as to which of two or more paths to follow. For non-strict functional languages, functions and language constructs exist to achieve the same result, but they are usually not termed control flow statements. a46cef3826 90 a46cef3826 39 a46cef3826 70 a46cef3826 69 a46cef3826 9 a46cef3826 35 a46cef3826 54 a46cef3826 109 a46cef3826 81

COBOL It is an imperative, procedural, and, since 2002, object-oriented language. Efforts to rewrite COBOL systems in newer languages have proven COBOL (; an acronym for "common business-oriented language") is a compiled English-like computer programming language designed for business use. Many large financial institutions were developing new systems in the language as late as 2006, but most programming in COBOL today is purely to maintain existing applications. government organizations which still use mainframe systems for high-volume transaction processing. Programs are being moved to new platforms, rewritten in modern languages, or replaced with other software. COBOL is still widely used in applications deployed on mainframe computers, such as large-scale batch and transaction processing jobs. COBOL is primarily used in business, finance, and administrative systems for companies and governments a46cef3826

COBOL was designed in 1959 by CODASYL and was partly based... a46cef3826 (pronounced "parallel", following the parallel lines notation from geometry; also known as reduced sum, parallel sum or parallel addition) is a binary operation which is used as a shorthand in electrical engineering, but is also used in kinetics, fluid mechanics and financial mathematics. The name parallel comes from the use of the operator computing the combined resistance of resistors in parallel. a46cef3826
