Fighting in ice hockey Some fights are spontaneous, while others are premeditated by the participants. Fighting is an established tradition in North American ice hockey, with a long history that involves many levels of amateur and professional play and includes some notable individual fights. While officials tolerate fighting during hockey games, they impose a variety of penalties on players who engage in fights. Fights may be fought by enforcers, or "goons" (French: bagarreurs)—players whose role is to fight and intimidate—on a given team, and are governed by a system of unwritten rules that players, coaches, officials, and the media refer to as "the code."
