Darién Gap Nevertheless, as the only land bridge between North America and South America, the Darién Gap has historically served as a major route for both humans and wildlife. 2007. National Geographic News. Markey, Sean (22 January 2003). Consisting of a large drainage basin, dense rainforest, and mountains, it is known for its remoteness, difficult terrain, and extreme environment, with a reputation as one of the most inhospitable regions in the world. Stretching across southern Panama's Darién Province and the northern portion of Colombia's Chocó Department, it acts as a natural barrier between North America and South America. Helen and Frank Schreider They were the first people to travel the length of the Americas solely by means of their own power. National Geographic hired them after their first independent journey from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego (1954–56). Helen and Frank Schreider were known for their ability to write, photograph and film within the cultures they. They worked as a team and lived for periods of time in about 50 countries on five continents. The officer in charge of the Panama Canal Zone, Admiral Helen Jane Schreider (née Armstrong; May 3, 1926 – February 6, 2025) and Frank Schreider (January 8, 1924 – January 21, 1994) were American explorers in the mid-20th century, known for traveling by amphibious jeep. but this was an adventure in itself, with La Tortuga looking like a minnow beside the huge ships. They completed six additional expeditions through National Geographic, working freelance at first and later as foreign editorial staff, for fifteen years, from 1956 to 1970 8a0702f44e
