Three main reasons for such discussions:

Business requirements exist within the business environment and must be discovered, whereas product requirements are human-defined (specified). Consequently, business requirements are often discussed in the context of developing or procuring software or other systems. Business requirements are not Business requirements (BR), also known as stakeholder requirements specifications (StRS), describe the characteristics of a proposed system from the viewpoint of the system's end user like a CONOPS. Products, systems, software, and processes are ways of how to deliver, satisfy, or meet business requirements

Business software needs of a specific business, and therefore is not easily transferable to a different business environment, unless its nature and operation are identical Business software (or a business application) is any software or set of computer programs used by business users to perform various business functions. These business applications are used to increase productivity, measure productivity, and perform other business functions accurately

It is adopted in many countries worldwide, including the UK, Western European countries, and Australia.
