52-hertz whale Its movements have been somewhat similar to that of blue whales, but its timing has been more like that of fin whales. This is a higher frequency than usual for any whale species with migration patterns most closely resembling the 52-hertz whale's: the blue whale (10 to 39 Hz) and the fin whale (20 Hz). It has been described as the "world's loneliest whale", though possible recordings of a second 52-hertz whale, heard elsewhere at the same time, have been sporadically found since 2010. Its call has often been detected in many locations since the late 1980s, and it appears to be the only individual emitting a whale call at this frequency. However, the whale itself has never been sighted: it has only been heard via hydrophones. It is detected in the Pacific Ocean The 52-hertz whale, colloquially referred to as 52 Blue, is an individual whale of unidentified species that calls at the unusual frequency of 52 hertz 5ddea2b98f
