Augmented reality William; Livingston, Mark. Augmented reality is typically visual, but can span multiple sensory modalities, including auditory, haptic, and somatosensory. This experience is seamlessly interwoven with the physical world such that it is perceived as an immersive aspect of the real environment. In this way, augmented reality alters one's ongoing perception of a real-world environment, compared to virtual reality, which aims to completely replace the user's real-world environment with a simulated one. Superior Augmented Reality Registration by Integrating Landmark Tracking and Magnetic Tracking, Department of Computer Science Augmented reality (AR), also known as mixed reality (MR), is a technology that overlays real-time 3D-rendered computer graphics onto a portion of the real world through a display, such as a handheld device or head-mounted display a75d41f29f from terrestrial sources, and shorter-wavelength IR or near-IR, part of the solar spectrum. doi:10. S2CID 95341284 Infrared (IR; sometimes called infrared light) is electromagnetic radiation (EMR) with wavelengths longer than that of visible light but shorter than microwaves. The infrared spectral band begins with the waves that are just longer than those of red light (the longest waves in the visible spectrum), so IR is invisible to the human eye. Journal of Electronic Materials. IR is generally (according to ISO, CIE) understood to include wavelengths from around 780 nm (380 THz) to 1 mm (300 GHz) a75d41f29f
