

The Five Forms

The consortium was formally established in 1965, but its roots lay in cooperative efforts between the oldest four members of the consortium dating back to 1914.

Five precepts The precepts have been compared with human rights because of their universal. The precepts are commitments to abstain from killing living beings, stealing, sexual misconduct, lying and intoxication. With regard to their fundamental role in Buddhist ethics, they have been compared with the Ten Commandments in Abrahamic religions or the ethical codes of Confucianism. They constitute the basic code of ethics to be respected by lay followers of Buddhism. The five precepts The five precepts (Sanskrit: pañcaśīla; Pali: pañcasīla) or five rules of training (Sanskrit: pañcaśikṣapada; Pali: pañcasikkhapada) is the most important system of morality for Buddhist lay people. The five precepts form the basis of several parts of Buddhist doctrine, both lay and monastic. Within the Buddhist doctrine, they are meant to develop mind and character to make progress on the path to enlightenment. They are sometimes referred to as the Śrāvakayāna precepts in the Mahāyāna tradition, contrasting them with the bodhisattva precepts. Moreover, the practice of the five precepts and other parts of śīla are described as forms of merit-making, means to create good karma. The precepts have been connected with utilitarianist, deontological and virtue approaches to ethics, though by 2017, such categorization by western terminology had mostly been abandoned by scholars

There are many origin stories of the high five, but the first and two most documented candidates are Dusty Baker and Glenn Burke of the Los Angeles Dodgers professional baseball team on October 2, 1977, and Wiley Brown and Derek Smith of the Louisville Cardinals men's college basketball team during the 1978–1979 season.

High five Its meaning varies with the context of use but can include as a greeting, congratulations, or celebration. The gesture is often preceded verbally by a phrase like "Give me five", "High five", or "Up top". The phrase is related to the slang "give me five" which is a request for some form of handshake – variations include "slap me five", "slip me five", The high five is a hand gesture whereby two people simultaneously raise one hand and slap the flat of their palm against the other

Members of the group call themselves Allah's Five Percenters, which reflects the concept that ten percent of the people in the world are elites and their agents, who know the truth of existence and opt to keep eighty-five percent of the world in ignorance and under their controlling thumb; the remaining five percent are those who know the truth and are determined to enlighten the eighty-five percent. Sulfolobales – grow in terrestrial volcanic hot springs with optimum growth occurring In some books the children go camping in the countryside, on a hike or holiday together elsewhere. However, the settings are almost always rural and enable the children to discover the simple joys of cottages, islands, the English and Welsh countryside and sea shores, as well as an outdoor life of picnics, bicycle trips and swimming. Wufang Shangdi Described as the "five changeable faces of Heaven", they represent Heaven's cosmic activity which shapes worlds as 五方; tán, "altars", imitating its order which is visible in the starry vault, the north celestial pole and its spinning constellations. They have also been defined simply as five special forms of the worship of the God of The Wǔfāng Shàngdì (Chinese: 五方上帝 "Five Regions' Highest Deities" or "Highest Deities of the Five Regions"), or simply Wǔdì (五帝; "Five Deities") or Wǔshén (五神; "Five Gods") are, in Chinese canonical texts and common Chinese religion, the fivefold manifestation of the supreme God of Heaven (天; Tiān, or equivalently 上帝; Shàngdì). In accordance with the Three Powers (三才; Sāncái) they have a celestial, a terrestrial and a chthonic form. The Han Chinese identify themselves as the descendants of the Red and Yellow Deities. This theology dates back at least to the Shang dynasty. The Five Deities themselves represent these constellations. say the material forces they preside over (their chthonic form) 8b95f9d2d2

In Southern styles, especially those associated with Guangdong and Fujian provinces, there are five traditional animal styles known as Ng Ying Kung Fu ("Five Forms")—Tiger, Crane, Leopard, Snake, and Dragon. The five animal martial arts styles supposedly originated from the Henan Shaolin Temple, which is north of the Yangtze River, even though imagery of these particular five animals as a distinct set (i.e. in the absence of other animals such as the horse or the monkey as in tai chi or xingyiquan) is either rare in Northern Shaolin martial arts—and Northern Chinese martial arts in general—or recent ("Five Form Eight Method Fist"). An alternate selection which is also widely used is the crane, the tiger, the monkey, the snake, and the mantis. 8b95f9d2d2 == History == 8b95f9d2d2 They are associated with the five colors, the five phases of the continuous creation (五运; Wuxing), the five classical planets of the Solar System and the five constellations rotating around the celestial pole, the five sacred mountains and five directions of space (their terrestrial form), and the five Dragon Gods... 8b95f9d2d2 Halobacteriales – found in water saturated or nearly saturated with salt. 8b95f9d2d2
