Singlish practice, there is often some level of code-switching present in the classroom. This is rather inevitable given that Singlish is the home language of Singlish (a portmanteau of Singapore and English), formally known as Colloquial Singaporean English, is an English-based creole language originating in Singapore. Singlish has similar roots and is highly mutually intelligible with Manglish, particularly Manglish spoken in Peninsular Malaysia. The term Singlish was first recorded in the early 1970s. Singlish arose out of a situation of prolonged language contact between speakers of many different Asian languages in Singapore, such as Malay, Cantonese, Hokkien, Mandarin, Teochew, and Tamil

English as a second or foreign language This difficulty is shown in such activities as spelling bees. Variably known as English as a foreign language (EFL), English as a second language (ESL), English for speakers of other languages (ESOL), English as an additional language (EAL), or English as a new language (ENL), these terms denote the study of English in environments where it is not the dominant language. The generalizations English as a second or foreign language refers to the use of English by individuals whose native language is different, commonly among students learning to speak and write English. English spelling and pronunciation are difficult even for native speakers to master. Programs such as ESL are designed as academic courses to instruct non-native speakers in English proficiency, encompassing both learning in English-speaking nations and abroad
