As in other miniature wargames, players enact battles using miniature models of warriors and fighting vehicles. The playing area is a tabletop model of a battlefield, comprising models of buildings, hills, trees, and other terrain features. Each player takes turns moving their model warriors around the battlefield and fighting their opponent's warriors. These fights are resolved using dice and simple arithmetic. 9c70d37ee4

Pseudocode Although pseudocode shares features with regular programming languages, it is intended for human reading rather than machine control. The reasons for using pseudocode are that it is In computer science, pseudocode is a description of the steps in an algorithm using a mix of conventions of programming languages (like assignment operator, conditional operator, loop) with informal, usually self-explanatory, notation of actions and conditions. Pseudocode typically omits details that are essential for machine implementation of the algorithm, meaning that pseudocode can only be verified by hand. The reasons for using pseudocode are that it is easier for people to understand than conventional programming language. augmented with natural language description details, where convenient, or with compact mathematical notation.
