The 154-page hardcover book features a one-page foreword from each of the authors. Jeff Grubb explains that this book introduces the Realms to the second edition of Advanced Dungeons & Dragons, and gives a brief overview of setting's history. Chapter 1 (pages 1-13) details the changes that have occurred to the Forgotten Realms... Forgotten Realms Adventures is a sourcebook which revised material from the earlier Forgotten Realms Sourcebook and Cyclopedia, updating it for the 2nd edition rules and the three years of products released for the Forgotten Realms up to that time. Among other things, this book discusses the deities, secret societies, treasures, spells and magic rules unique to the campaign setting, as well as short descriptions and maps of the heartlands and its cities. The game combines traditional role-playing elements such as taking on quests, equipping characters and improving them with levelling up, alongside real-time strategy elements that focus on gathering resources to construct bases and train an army of units to help in defeating opposing forces, with the game featuring a selection of factions to control. Alongside the game's story campaign, players can also engage in skirmish battles using any faction against the AI, and multiplayer matches against online opponents.

Large Stone Structure Mazar tentatively dated the findings to the tenth to ninth century BCE. Mazar announced the discovery on 4 August 2005, and stated that she believed it may be the remains of King David's palace as recorded in the Hebrew Bible (Tanakh)'s Book of Samuel II ("Shmuel Bet"). The excavation was sponsored by the Shalem Center, a Jerusalem-based research institute founded in 1994. The Large Stone Structure (Hebrew: מבנה האבן הגדול Mivne haEven haGadol) is the name given to a set of archaeological remains interpreted by the excavator The Large Stone Structure (Hebrew: מבנה האבן הגדול Mivne haEven haGadol) is the name given to a set of archaeological remains interpreted by the excavator, Israeli archaeologist Eilat Mazar, as being part of a single large public building in the City of David, presumably the oldest settlement core of Jerusalem. The interpretation of the remains as those of a single building, the suggested date, and the association with King David, have been challenged by other archaeologists. Mazar chose this particular name for the structure because of its proximity to another site known as the Stepped Stone Structure

The magazine was first known for its coverage of rock music and political reporting by Hunter S. Thompson. In the late 1990s, the magazine broadened and shifted its focus to a younger readership interested in youth-oriented television shows, film actors, and popular music.
