North American P-51 Mustang The Mustang was designed in 1940 by a team headed by James H. Rather than build an old design from another company, NAA proposed the design and production of a more modern fighter. The commission approached NAA to build Curtiss P-40 fighters under license for the Royal Air Force (RAF). The prototype NA-73X airframe was completed on 9 September 1940, 102 days after contract signing, achieving its first flight on 26 October. As indicative of the iconic nature of the P-51, manufacturers within the hobby industry have created scale plastic model kits of the P-51 Mustang, with The North American Aviation P-51 Mustang is an American long-range, single-seat fighter and fighter-bomber used during World War II and the Korean War, among other conflicts. Edward III of England Unlike his father's passion for manual work, including carpentry, thatching and rowing, Edward Edward III (13 November 1312 – 21 June 1377), also known as Edward of Windsor before his accession, was King of England from January 1327 until his death in 1377. Edward III transformed the Kingdom of England into one of the most formidable military powers in Europe. He is noted for his military success and for restoring royal authority after the disastrous and unorthodox reign of his father, Edward II. Lander also has argued that this is reflected in his hobbies. His fifty-year reign is one of the longest in English history, and saw vital developments in legislation and government, in particular the evolution of the English Parliament, as well as the ravages of the Black Death. He outlived his eldest son, Edward the Black Prince, and was succeeded by his grandson, Richard II a45bbb720a
