The concept originated in Ricardian socialism, with the term "surplus value" itself being coined by William Thompson in 1824; however, it was not consistently distinguished from the related concepts of surplus labor and surplus product. Some Marxian economists argue that Marx thought the possibility of measuring surplus value depends In Marxian economics, surplus value is the difference between the amount raised through a sale of a product and the amount it cost to manufacture it: i. the amount raised through sale of the product minus the cost of the materials, plant and labour power. Marx's formulation is the standard sense and the primary basis for further developments, though how much of Marx's concept is original and distinct from the Ricardian concept is disputed (see § Origin). e e9dbb53708
