Natural History (Pliny) Isager writes in the introduction to his analysis of Pliny's chapters on art in the Natural History that his intention is: to show how Pliny in his encyclopedic The Natural History (Latin: Naturalis historia) is a Latin work by Pliny the Elder. Despite the work's title, its subject area is not limited to what is today understood by natural history; Pliny himself defines his scope as "the natural world, or life". He published the first 10 books in AD 77, but had not made a final revision of the remainder at the time of his death during the AD 79 eruption of Vesuvius. The rest was published posthumously by Pliny's nephew, Pliny. It is encyclopedic in scope, but its structure is not like that of a modern encyclopedia. It is the only work by Pliny to have survived, and the last that he published. The largest single work to have survived from the Roman Empire to the modern day, the Natural History compiles information gleaned from other ancient authors 5aed543a98
