Marvin Terban

Figurative (or non-literal) language is the usage of words in addition to, or deviating beyond, their conventionally accepted definitions in order to convey a more complex meaning or achieve a heightened effect. This is done by language-users presenting words in such a way that their audience equates, compares, or associates the words with normally unrelated meanings. A common intended effect of figurative language is to elicit audience responses... 0ab2baae9f Literal language is the usage of words exactly according to their direct, straightforward, or conventionally accepted meanings: their denotation. 0ab2baae9f
