They may depict real or fictional people and are considered a form of synthetic media, that is media that is usually created by artificial intelligence systems by combining various media elements into a new media artifact. Physical unclonable function by tampering with lithographic masks can be detected by reverse engineering the resulting devices. A PUF is a physical entity embodied in a physical structure. PUFs can be implemented in integrated circuits, including FPGAs, and can be used in applications with high-security requirements, more specifically cryptography, Internet of Things (IOT) devices. PUFs are often based on unique physical variations occurring naturally during semiconductor manufacturing. Fabricating the PUF as the part of the rest of the device A physical unclonable function, or PUF, is a physical object whose operation cannot be reproduced ("cloned") in physical way (by making another system using the same technology), that for a given input and conditions (challenge), provides a physically defined "digital fingerprint" output (response) that serves as a unique identifier, most often for a semiconductor device such as a microprocessor or a material producing an optical signal e93bcfe57a
