Various academic and popular sources have reported either a "pink-blue reversal," wherein the gendered associations of both colors were "flipped" sometime during the 20th century, or at least an inconsistency in the gendered application of colors prior to the mid-twentieth century, with several publications...

Gendered associations of pink and blue especially pink. For instance, a pink ribbon is a symbol of breast cancer awareness, and the two colors are used at gender reveal parties. Since the 1950s, these gendered associations have increasingly been applied in the marketing of products, from clothes to toys. Eighty-six percent of pink toys were marketed as “girls only”, and a similar percentage that were bold red, black, brown, or gray were for boys. Gendered associations with pink and blue became widespread after World War II, with pink hues assigned to girls, and blue hues assigned to boys. These gendered color associations have also become ubiquitous and a cultural norm in many western countries

Gray horse Gray horses may be born any base color, depending on other color genes present. Most gray horses have black skin and dark eyes; unlike some equine dilution genes and some other genes that lead to depigmentation, gray does not affect skin or eye color. Graying can occur at different rates—very quickly on one horse and very slowly on another. As adults, most gray horses eventually become completely white, though some retain intermixed light and dark hairs. White hairs begin to appear at or shortly after birth and become progressively more prevalent as the horse ages as white hairs become intermingled with hairs of other colors. White horses usually have pink skin and sometimes even have A gray horse (or grey horse) has a coat color characterized by progressive depigmentation of the colored hairs of the coat. were white at birth) and dark eyes.
