are far behind, learning fractions and decimals, which are math concepts that the white and Asian students learned The racial achievement gap in the United States refers to disparities in educational achievement between differing ethnic/racial groups. It manifests itself in a variety of ways: African-American and Hispanic students are more likely to earn lower grades, score lower on standardized tests, drop out of high school, and they are less likely to enter and complete college than whites, while whites score lower than Asian Americans using fractions, decimals and percentages. There is a close relationship between intelligent tutoring, cognitive learning theories and design; and there is ongoing research to improve the effectiveness of ITS. ITSs have the common goal of enabling learning in a meaningful and effective manner by using a variety of computing technologies. The tutor records the success rates while a student An intelligent tutoring system (ITS) is a computer system that imitates human tutors and aims to provide immediate and customized instruction or feedback to learners, usually without requiring intervention from a human teacher. An ITS typically aims to replicate the demonstrated benefits of one-to-one, personalized tutoring, in contexts. There are many examples of ITSs being used in both formal education and professional settings in which they have demonstrated their capabilities and limitations

There is disagreement among scholars regarding the causes of the racial achievement gap. Some focus on the home life of individual students, and others focus more on unequal access to resources between certain ethnic groups. Additionally, political histories, such as anti-literacy laws, and current policies, such as those related to school funding, have resulted in an...
