School fees in New Zealand Activity fees are School fees in New Zealand is a term referring to monetary payments by parents or guardians to their child's school. (1998-25) advises that it is inappropriate for activity fees to cover student workbooks (textbooks that students write in) and photocopying

In state and state-integrated schools, "school fees" is most commonly used to describe a request from schools to parents or guardians for a donation

(usually annual) to their child's school. Although this payment is entirely voluntary, some school boards use terms such as "Fees", "School Levy" or "Parental Contribution" to coerce payment from parents. The Ministry of Education direction from its 1998-25 Fees Circular to school Boards advises that terms to imply that payment of the sum is compulsory should not be used, particularly "fee" or "levy". Instead, the term "School Donation" is suggested. d6440fcfa0 State and state-integrated schools can charge Activity Fees for items above and... d6440fcfa0
