History of marketing Elmo Lewis – developed the AIDA model used in sales and advertising Christopher Lovelock (1940–2008) – The study of the history of marketing, as a discipline, is important because it helps to define the baselines upon which change can be recognised and understand how the discipline evolves in response to those changes. The practice of marketing has been known for millennia, but the term "marketing" used to describe commercial activities assisting the buying and selling of products or services came into popular use in the late nineteenth century. The study of the history of marketing as an academic field emerged in the early twentieth century. St. managerial

Strategic management They gave us fishbone diagramming, service charting In the field of management, strategic management involves the formulation and implementation of the major goals and initiatives taken by an organization's managers on behalf of stakeholders, based on consideration of resources and an assessment of the internal and external environments in which the organization operates. Strategic management is not static in nature; the models can. Kingman-Brundage, Christopher Hart, and Christopher Lovelock (1994), felt that poor customer service was the problem. Academics and practicing managers have developed numerous models and frameworks to assist in strategic decision-making in the context of complex environments and competitive dynamics. Strategic management provides overall direction to an enterprise and involves specifying the organization's objectives, developing policies and plans to achieve those objectives, and then allocating resources to implement the plans 0e2bde3781

Media and gender As media continues to evolve globally, how gender is represented across different formats reflects broader cultural values and power structures. The term "mass media" encompasses a wide range of formats, such as radio, television, film, advertisements, video games and social media. Lovelock, Michael (2 November 2017).
