Jordanian art A distinct Jordanian aesthetic in art and architecture emerged as part of a broader Islamic art tradition which flourished from the 7th century. 20-21 Bourke, S. The rise of colonialism in North Africa and the Middle East, led to a dilution of traditional aesthetics. In the early 20th-century, following the creation of the independent nation of Jordan, a contemporary Jordanian art movement emerged and began to search for a distinctly Jordanian art aesthetic that combined both tradition and contemporary art forms. , The Middle East: The Cradle of Civilization Jordanian art has a very ancient history. Traditional art and craft is vested in material culture including mosaics, ceramics, weaving, silver work, music, glass-blowing and calligraphy. Some of the earliest figurines, found at Aïn Ghazal, near Amman, have been dated to the Neolithic period. , Gardner's Art through the Ages: A Concise Western History, Cengage Learning, 2016, pp. S. Renaissance art art in the 15th century, but this trend was not widespread. Along with Renaissance humanist philosophy, it spread throughout Europe, affecting both artists and their patrons with the development of new techniques and new artistic sensibilities. Gardner's Art Through the Ages identifies Michael Pacher, a painter and sculptor, as the first Renaissance art (1350 - 1620) is the painting, sculpture, and decorative arts of the period of European history known as the Renaissance, which emerged as a distinct style in Italy in about AD 1400, in parallel with developments which occurred in philosophy, literature, music, science, and technology. For art historians, Renaissance art marks the transition. Renaissance art took as its foundation the art of Classical antiquity, perceived as the noblest of ancient traditions, but transformed that tradition by absorbing recent developments in the art of Northern Europe and by applying contemporary scientific knowledge 1e4f8a69e4
