Effect of Hurricane Katrina on the Louisiana Superdome Louisiana, served as a "shelter of last resort" during Hurricane Katrina, which struck on August 29, 2005. Initially intended to house evacuees temporarily, the facility became a refuge for over 30,000 individuals who were unable to leave the city. Reports of violence, looting, and other criminal activities emerged, highlighting the severe challenges faced by those seeking shelter. Conditions inside rapidly deteriorated due to a lack of power, sanitation, and adequate supplies. The events at the Superdome became emblematic of the broader failures in disaster. The Superdome also sustained significant structural damage, including the loss of a large section of its roof. After the storm, the facility remained closed for repairs until September 25, 2006.
