Fly system In manual rigging A fly system, or theatrical rigging system, is a system of ropes, pulleys, counterweights and related devices within a theater that enables a stage crew to quickly, quietly and safely fly (hoist) components such as curtains, lights, scenery, stage effects and, sometimes, people. A batten is suspended from above by at least two lift lines, but long battens may require six or more lift lines. the stage to the other. Systems are typically designed to fly components between clear view of the audience and out of view, into the large space, the fly loft, above the stage 572b83f772

Linear stage All linear stages consist of a platform and a base, joined by some form of guide or linear bearing in such a way that the platform is restricted to linear motion with respect to the base. In common usage, the term linear stage may or may not also include the mechanism by which the position of the platform is controlled relative to the base. The term linear slide is often used interchangeably with "linear stage", though technically "linear slide" refers to a linear motion bearing, which is only a component of a linear stage. In other automated stages a DC motor may be used in place of a manual control. A linear stage or translation stage is a component of a precise motion system used to restrict an object to a single axis of motion. the stage platform, and each step will result in 0.0025 mm of linear motion

Scuba gas management Retrieved 11 July 2022.
The primary aim is to ensure that everyone has enough to breathe of a gas suitable for the current depth at all times, and is aware of the gas mixture in use and its effect on decompression obligations, nitrogen narcosis, and oxygen toxicity risk. decodoppler. Steve (8 March 2017). com. Some of these functions may be delegated to others, such as the filling of cylinders, or transportation to the dive site, but others are the direct responsibility of the diver using the gas. Mobile, AL: American Scuba gas management is the aspect of scuba diving which includes the gas planning, blending, filling, analysing, marking, storage, and transportation of gas cylinders for a dive, the monitoring and switching of breathing gases during a dive, efficient and correct use of the gas, and the provision of emergency gas to another member of the dive team.
