Feminist children's literature Feminist criticism of children's literature is therefore expected, since it is a type of feminist literature. In this way feminist ideas are regularly found in the structure of children's literature. The cover of hooks' book, drawn by Laura DeSantis, depicts children alongside adults, showing the importance of the youth. Children's literature and women's literature have many similarities. Both often deal with being seen as weak and placed towards the bottom of a hierarchy. She argues "Children's literature is one of the most crucial sites for feminist education for critical consciousness precisely because beliefs and identities are still being formed". The presence of feminism in children's literature has evolved over the years, but the overall message and goals have remained consistent. children's story that subtly speaks out about the issues of gender stereotypes is The Paper Bag Princess by Robert Munsch. In her book Feminism Is for Everybody: Passionate Politics, bell hooks states her belief that all types of media, including writing and children's books, need to promote feminist ideals. It is a fairytale that has a strong Feminist children's literature is the writing of children's literature through a feminist lens. Feminist children's literature has played a critical role for the feminist movement, especially in the past half century

He grew up in a family of nine children. Munsch graduated from Fordham University in 1969 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in history and from Boston University in 1971 with a Master of Arts degree in anthropology.

Princess and dragon Dragons. Northrop Frye identified it as a central form of the quest romance. A feminist subversion of the concept for young readers is Robert Munsch's The Paper Bag Princess, in which a princess outwits a dragon to save a prince Princess and dragon is an archetypical premise common to many legends, fairy tales, and chivalric romances

The motifs of the hero who finds the princess about to be sacrificed to the dragon and saves her, the false hero who takes his place, and the final revelation of the true hero, are the identifying marks of the Aarne-Thompson folktale type 300, the Dragon-Slayer. They also appear in type 303, the Two Brothers. These two tales have been found, in different variants, in countries all over the world. This section contains examples of both classic and more modern writing. == Literature == The story involves an upper-class woman, generally a princess or similar high-ranking nobility, saved from a dragon, either a literal dragon or a similar danger, by the virtuous hero (see damsel in distress). She may be the first woman endangered by the peril, or may be the end of a long succession of women who were not of as high birth as she is, nor as fortunate. Normally the princess ends up married to the dragonslayer.

Princess Elizabeth's plans to marry Prince Ronald are thwarted when a fire-breathing dragon kidnaps the prince, destroying her castle and clothes in the process. Elizabeth dons a paper bag, the only garment not scorched by the dragon's fire, and pursues the dragon. She tricks the dragon into tiring himself out by breathing fire and flying around the world. After the dragon falls asleep, Elizabeth rescues Ronald, but the prince proves ungrateful for her bravery, mocking her appearance and telling her to return when she looks more like a princess. Elizabeth rebukes Ronald for his ingratitude, breaks off their engagement and dances... ea0d1c17e1
