

Collecting Japanese Antiques

The knives of collectors may be antiques or even marketed as collectible. Antiques are knives at least 100 years old; collectible knives are of a later vintage than antique, and may even be new. Collectors and dealers may use the word vintage to describe older collectibles. Some knives which were once everyday objects may now be collectible since almost all those once produced have been destroyed or discarded, like certain... 4e04004247

Coin collecting Coins of interest to collectors include beautiful, rare, and historically significant pieces. Coin collecting can be differentiated from numismatics, in that the latter is the systematic study of currency as a whole, though the two disciplines are closely interlinked. Collectors may be interested, for example, in complete sets of a particular design or denomination, coins that were in circulation for only a brief time, or coins with errors. Coin collecting is the collecting of coins or other forms of minted legal tender. Umetada 246 Lyle Official Antiques Review 2001
Umetada is a Japanese style of decoration for metal work. Although he is said to have done metal carving for sword mounts, not a single sword guard that can safely be said to have been carved by him remains. But in the Momoyama period, a certain Umetada Myoju (1558-1631) emerged to become the founder of the manufacture of so-called "new swords," or shinto, and to rank with Kaneie and Nobuie as a great designer and maker of sword guards. But he was not the. Umetada Myoju established the style and the fame of the Umetada name, which flourished greatly after his time. Most of the things that do remain are works in inlay, (zogan) in copper, brass, and shakudo using designs that recall the colorful pictures of the Ogata Kōrin school. It may have been used by silversmiths since the Muromachi period.
