Collision domain Point coordination function and distributed coordination function are specific implementations. Lammle, Todd (2004) A collision domain is a network segment (connected by a shared medium or through repeaters) where simultaneous data transmissions collide with one another as a result of more than one device attempting to send a packet on the network segment at the same time. Devices outside the collision domain do not have collisions with those inside. Members of a collision domain may be involved in collisions with one another. employed by Wireless Multimedia Extensions. The collision domain applies particularly in wireless networks, but also affected early versions of Ethernet 28a033017a

A channel access method dictates that only one device in the collision domain may transmit at any one time, and the other devices in the domain listen to the network and refrain from transmitting while others are already transmitting in order to avoid collisions. Because only... 28a033017a
