Franz Kafka Widely regarded as a major figure of 20th-century literature, his works fuse elements of realism and the fantastique, and typically feature isolated protagonists facing bizarre or surreal predicaments and incomprehensible bureaucratic powers. Kafka's extant letters to Bauer were published as Briefe an Felice (Letters to Felice); her letters did not survive. His work has widely influenced artists, philosophers, composers, filmmakers, literary historians, religious scholars, and cultural theorists. The term Kafkaesque has entered the lexicon to describe situations like those depicted in his writings. He is also celebrated for his brief fables and aphorisms, which frequently incorporated comedic elements alongside the darker themes of his longer works. After he had written to Bauer's Franz Kafka (3 July 1883 – 3 June 1924) was a German-language Jewish Czech writer and novelist born in Prague, in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. His best-known works include the novella The Metamorphosis (1915) and the novels The Trial (1924) and The Castle (1926)

He attended the Università Popolare dello Spettacolo in Naples. In 2015, Balsamo joined the comedy group The Jackal, and made his film debut in Babbo Natale non viene da nord by Maurizio Casagrande. Metaphysical painting 1920s and later, the legacy of Metaphysical painting influenced the work of Felice Casorati, Max Ernst, and others. The movement began in 1910 with de Chirico, whose dreamlike works with sharp contrasts of light and shadow often had a vaguely threatening, mysterious quality, "painting that which cannot be seen". De Chirico, his younger brother Alberto Savinio, and Carrà formally established the school and its principles in 1917.
