Memoization Memoization has also been used in other contexts (and for purposes other than speed gains), such as in simple mutually recursive descent parsing. was coined by Donald Michie in 1968 and is derived from the Latin word memorandum ('to be remembered'), usually truncated as memo in American English, and In computing, memoization or memoisation is an optimization technique used primarily to speed up computer programs by storing the results of expensive calls to pure functions and returning the cached result when the same inputs occur again. It is a type of caching, distinct from other forms of caching such as buffering and page replacement. In the context of some logic programming languages, memoization is also known as tabling eb61f65184

A good article (GA) is a Wikipedia article that meets a core set of editorial standards, the good article criteria, passing through the good article nomination process successfully. They are well-written, contain factually accurate and verifiable information, are broad in coverage, neutral in point of view, stable, and illustrated, where possible, by relevant images with suitable copyright licenses. Good articles do not have to be as comprehensive as featured articles (FA), but they should not omit any major facets: a comparison of the criteria for good and featured articles describes further differences. eb61f65184
