Lucky Strike was introduced as a brand of plug tobacco (chewing tobacco bound together with molasses) by an American firm R. A. Patterson in 1871 and evolved into a cigarette by the early 1900s. The brand style name was inspired by the gold rushes of the era, and was intended to connote a top-quality blend. Lucky Trimble is a ten-year-old girl who lives in Hard Pan, a small town (population 43) in the California desert. She has two friends: Lincoln, an avid knot tyer and expected by his mother to be the President when he grows up; and Miles, a five-year-old whose favorite book is Are You My Mother? by P. D. Eastman. After Lucky's mother died two years earlier, her father called upon his first ex-wife, Brigitte, to come to the United States from France to take care of Lucky. Portland Mercury deemed it a "modern classic," writing that it approaches "the raw materials of guitar rock with a cubist's perspective, creating subtly complex structures full of impossible angles and complex formulas that miraculously balance out every time." After being sentenced to do time in prison, Hands and Guscott make a daring escape plan as the prison is scheduled to put on a theatrical show of Nelson: The Musical. During rehearsals, the inmates are unable to find a pianist for the show, until one inmate, Cliff Gumbell (Timothy Spall) volunteers and impresses them with his amazing piano skills. Hands is cast as Nelson (against his will) and Guscott is cast as Hardy, much to Guscott's dismay as his character kisses Nelson as he dies. b0d0a213ed
