COVID-19 testing It is also COVID-19 testing involves analyzing samples to assess the current or past presence of SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19 and is responsible for the COVID-19 pandemic. They are less useful for diagnosing current infections because antibodies may not develop for weeks after infection. Antibody tests (serology immunoassays) instead show whether someone once had the disease. Molecular tests for viral presence through its molecular components are used to diagnose individual cases and to allow public health authorities to trace and contain outbreaks. The two main types of tests detect either the presence of the virus or antibodies produced in response to infection. although this is not certain. Sampling saliva may reduce the risk for health care professionals by eliminating close physical interaction. It is used to assess disease prevalence, which aids the estimation of the infection fatality rate
