Ecological niche For a detailed discussion, especially of competition and reinforcement of reproductive In ecology, a niche is the match of a species to a specific environmental condition. "The type and number of variables comprising the dimensions of an environmental niche vary from one species to another [and] the relative importance of particular environmental variables for a species may vary according to the geographic and biotic contexts". It describes how an organism or population responds to the distribution of resources and competitors (for example, by growing when resources are abundant, and when predators, parasites and pathogens are scarce) and how it in turn alters those same factors (for example, limiting access to resources by other organisms, acting as a food source for predators and a consumer of prey).
that reinforcement and not competition is responsible for niche segregation 5943c84e72
