Nuclear equivalence p. (2011). ISBN 978-1-111-77437-0 According to the principle of nuclear equivalence, the nuclei of essentially all differentiated adult cells of an individual are genetically (though not necessarily metabolically) identical to one another and to the nucleus of the zygote from which they descended. This means that virtually all somatic cells in an adult have the same genes. 370. nuclei are said to exhibit totipotency. Solomon, Berg, Martin, Eldra, Linda, Diana W. BIOLOGY, 9th edition.
