== Critical reception == For Whom the Bell Tolls was Ingrid Bergman's first Technicolor film. Hemingway's desire for Cooper and Bergman for the leading roles was much publicized, but Paramount initially cast Vera Zorina with Cooper. After shooting footage with Zorina's hair cut short (truer to the novel's character—a shorn head—than Bergman's "look" in the film), she was replaced with Bergman. Robert Jordan is an American, formerly a professor of Spanish language at the University of Montana. f7ffb9dd64 It was published just after the end of the Spanish Civil War (1936-1939), which had been covered in detail in international media at the time. The writer assumes his audience knows that the war was between the leftist government of the Second Spanish Republic, which many foreigners went to Spain to help, and the Nationalist faction, which was supported by Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy. In 1940, the year the book was published, the United States had not yet entered World War II. f7ffb9dd64 After Stefan (Paul Wesley) lost his memory, Damon (Ian Somerhalder) tries to help him remember. He remembers the date and where he is, but he cannot remember who he is, who the people are around him, or even that he is a vampire. Damon presents Stefan with his diaries to jog his memory with, but he still has no recollection of his past. f7ffb9dd64

Larry Flick from Billboard magazine was very positive in his review of the song, writing, "This brilliant single from the Gibb brothers' Size Isn't Everything album is arguably the finest tune they've written and recorded in 15 years, a no-nonsense romantic ballad that parts the darkest clouds and lets the blue burst through. Top 40 hasn't had a single this poetic uplifting in ages, and album rock formats should seize on the original five minute version, which features an acoustic guitar-framed arrangement that rivals Soul Asylum. Better than a comeback, the Bee Gees have simply got the best new song on the airwaves..." For Whom the Bell Tolls was nominated for nine Academy Awards, including Best Picture. The film claimed one win as Katina Paxinou won Best Supporting Actress.
